Chris Steincamp has hired SCS Aquaterra to be onsite during the multimedia inspections because he is unable to attend the inspections himself. I figured this out by speaking with Mike Atterbury, the acting Director of Operations for Black Tea. I'm not certain the consultants from SCS Aquaterra know why they are here onsite, but everything is above board.

Mark,

My client forwarded an email from you that you sent Friday afternoon. Please send all correspondence related to this matter to my attention so that we can properly respond to your requests in a timely manner. I spoke to Sara Hertz Wu and asked her to include me on correspondence as well. I am concerned that you have asked for a substantial subset of the documentation in the information request letter be provided on what amounts to 24 hour notice, in spite of the fact that you approved an extension until August 4th on the Section 308 Request earlier that same day. As I told you on the phone, the first I became aware of this matter was Thursday, June 4th the day that we spoke on the phone. I do not think that my client will be able to come up with the documents requested for tomorrow's inspection. You have also asked to speak with several third party contractors. We will likely not be able to provide access to third parties for you tomorrow. Obviously, we want to cooperate with you to resolve the matters that you are concerned about. I assume that you will go forward with the inspection tomorrow. Please forward a complete copy of all of your notes and any reports generated during the inspection at your earliest convenience. Thank you.
